MESSAGE

I am glad to know that the International Organisation for Educational Development (IOED) – International / Inter-governmental organisation is launching Skill India Campaign under the name and style 'pilot fetch' in India. I understand that the IOED will converge, coordinate, implement and monitor the skilling activities across India.

It is heartening to note that the skill of young people who lack formal certifications, such as workers in India's vast unorganised sectors, will be recognised through an initiative known as "Recognition of Prior Learning (RPL)", who will have a chance to be assessed and certified for the skills that they already possess. The IOED's launch of the Skill India Campaign is an important initiative towards achieving the objectives of skilling with Speed, Scale and Standards across the country. The step for establishing International Human Empowerment University (Micro University) based on SWAYAM programme of the Govt. of India is appreciable to promote Corporate centric Skill based employable quality education in the field of Paramedical, Professional and Technical Studies.

I congratulate the Management and Executive Members of the IOED for their vision and commitment to Youth Development. I wish the pilot project every success.
